Kevin F. Sweeney Presents to Central Jersey Institute of Internal Auditors

Chamberlain Hrdlicka senior counsel discusses attorney-client privilege at annual anti-fraud conference

PHILADELPHIA (May 2017) – Chamberlain Hrdlicka Senior Counsel Kevin F. Sweeney, a former federal tax prosecutor, discussed the issue of preserving attorney-client privilege during internal investigations at an annual fraud conference organized by The Institute of Internal Auditors Central Jersey Chapter.

At the conference on May 10, Sweeney presented “Navigating the Minefield: Strategies for Establishing and Preserving Attorney-Client Privilege during Internal Investigations.” It focused on the importance of attorney-client privilege to effective legal counsel, noting that proper legal assistance requires full disclosure, but that clients will divulge details only if confidences are protected.

At Chamberlain Hrdlicka, Sweeney puts his experience and longstanding connections to use representing individuals and corporate clients in IRS audits, civil tax litigation, white-collar criminal defense matters, and corporate investigations. Prior to joining Chamberlain Hrdlicka, Sweeney worked for the U.S. Department of Justice, Tax Division as a federal prosecutor.
