Oil Drilling Consultants found to be Independent Contractors

Employment Law Daily

March 8, 2019

In an article published on March 8, 2019 by Employment Law Daily, shareholder and chair of the firm's national labor and employment group Annette Idalski is featured for serving as lead counsel for Premier Directional Drilling in Parrish v. Premier Directional Drilling.

In the highly anticipated court case with broad implications for the oil industry, the Fifth Circuit Court of Appeals court unanimously concluded that directional drilling engineers can be classified as independent contractors and not employees. The appeals court concluded that the factors described in United States v. Silk weighed in favor of independent contractor status.
