In an article published on May 24, 2022, Law360 Pulse highlights Atlanta-based Senior Associate Chadd Reynolds and Associate Katie Fish joining the firm.

Fish told Law360 Pulse that she was drawn to move to the firm because of its real estate practice and one of the practice's co-chairs, Stephanie Friese Aron, who handles commercial real estate transactions. "I made the move to Chamberlain because the real estate team handles sophisticated and complex acquisition, disposition and leasing matters under the leadership of Stephanie Friese Aron, whom I had previously worked opposite of and think very highly of," Fish said.

Reynolds told Law360 Pulse in a statement that he wanted to move to the firm because of its complex legal dispute work for "industry-leading clients." "I was drawn to their commercial litigation practice because of the level of representation their well-regarded and experienced attorneys provide," Reynolds said. "The firm has a uniquely collaborative atmosphere for being a midsize firm."
