International Tax

International TaxOverview

A well-planned tax strategy is essential for navigating the complexities of today's global business environment. Chamberlain Hrdlicka is known for our deep tax and legal experience and comprehensive understanding of U.S. international tax laws. We are highly skilled in offering bespoke solutions to clients with intricate cross-border tax planning needs. We represent a diverse range of domestic and international clients, from high-net-worth multinational families, cross-border individuals, investors, private equity funds, and multinational companies. Chamberlain Hrdlicka offers strategic guidance on tax planning in a wide range of industries with a focus on minimizing tax liabilities across jurisdictions.

In addition to our tax planning experience, we provide robust cross-border corporate, legal business support and counsel to clients operating internationally. Our team is proficient at resolving tax controversies; planning for cross border corporate and legal operations, addressing complex international issues; and defending taxpayers in international, state, and local tax audits. We also offer strong representation in government investigations, aiming to protect our clients' interests throughout every phase of tax compliance and dispute resolution.

Why Chamberlain Hrdlicka?

Our team of dual-licensed attorneys offers both domestic and international legal insights essential for navigating complex cross-border tax issues, along with bilingual proficiency in drafting and negotiating business transactions. We also work with the clients team of Spanish-speaking advisors and client groups advising on all international tax planning matters.

With a strong emphasis on Latin American inbound and outbound tax planning, we leverage our position as a border state to Mexico to provide insight and bespoke international tax solutions to clients in the region. Additionally, our firms leadership role with ITAMs International Executive Tax Program in Mexico (along with the University of San Diego, School of Law) underscores our commitment to staying at the forefront of international tax developments. Our team helps our clients benefit from the latest developments in the law, can implement sound and legally defensible international tax strategies, and stay current on constant changes of U.S. and Treaty partners tax law. This blend of experience, geographic advantage, and educational collaboration positions Chamberlain Hrdlicka to deliver significant value to our clients.
