Rob Adkins focuses his practice on civil litigation and personal injury defense. He represents his clients in a wide range of contested matters across Texas, approaching each case with thorough preparation, sound judgment, and a focus on practical, results-driven solutions.

Rob's experience spans all phases of litigation, including pre-suit investigation, early case evaluation, discovery, motion practice, and alternative dispute resolution. He brings additional perspective from earlier work on the plaintiff side of personal-injury cases. He works closely with clients to assess risk, identify key issues, and develop targeted strategies that efficiently resolve disputes while protecting their long-term interests.

Clients and colleagues value Rob's responsiveness, professionalism, and analytical approach. He is committed to clear communication and thoughtful advocacy, recognizing that effective representation requires both mastery of the law and an understanding of the real-world considerations clients face.

Outside the office, Rob enjoys spending time with his family and staying active in his community and church. A former college athlete, he continues to follow professional and college sports and values the preparation, strategy, and teamwork that competition demands—principles that also shape his approach to litigation. He also appreciates spending time outdoors, especially when he can get to the beach with his family.
