Yvette Medina's career has spanned from representing injured clients in NYC to landlord/tenant cases, immigration cases, family law, property owner's associations litigation, insurance defense, and has represented clients on claims ranging from relatively minor personal injuries to land-use disputes to substantial commercial disputes and much more. She spent a year studying International Law in Rotterdam, NL. Her diverse background allows her to view a case from all angles to produce the best outcome for her clients.

Yvette has defended corporate clients as well as individuals and always strives for the best outcome for her clients. She grew up in Los Alamos, New Mexico, attended college in San Antonio and attended law school and business school in Long Island, NY before returning to Texas. When not practicing law, Yvette enjoys hiking, paddle boarding, reading, spending time with family and friends, and spoiling her Toy Australian Shepard--Ruth Barker Ginsberg, named after her idol.
