Lansing, Mich. - Julie Fershtman, a shareholder at Foster Swift and one of the nation's best-known and most experienced Equine Law practitioners, has launched a new Equine Law blog. Foster Swift attorney and Equine Law practitioner April L. Neihsl, Esq., is also expected to contribute to the blog.

The new blog is geared to all facets of the equine industry and will provide practical information on legal developments. With weekly updates, it will share timely and useful information regarding laws affecting equine businesses of all sizes, associations, non-profits, and individual horse owners. Current blog topics address liability, insurance, sales disputes, employment, and contracts. Reader input is welcome. Please visit the blog at www.equinelawblog.com.

Fershtman, a lawyer for 25 years, has extensive Equine Law experience. With a national clientele, she has tried equine cases before juries in 4 states. She is also the author of 3 books on Equine Law and has spoken at conferences in 27 states.
