

Foster Swift Releases Video on FOIA in Relation to School Law

FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE

May 19, 2016

LANSING - Foster Swift has recently released a video in their Legal Basics Series which discusses Freedom of Information Act requests as they relate to public schools.

Attorney, Laura Genovich, discusses the top three things schools need to know when it comes to FOIA and when to consult with legal counsel. According to Genovich, "There are a lot of situations where public records can be exempt from disclosure." Learning more about FOIA requests can help protect schools, school officials and the rights of students.

The Legal Basics Video Series provides general information and are not legal advice. The video series is intended to help school officials proactively identify legal needs and select experienced legal counsel.
