Claire Addis's practice focuses on complex commercial, securities, and antitrust disputes as well as matters arising from mergers and acquisitions and corporate governance issues. She represents clients in high-stakes federal and state litigation, domestic and international arbitrations, and internal and regulatory investigations. She has counseled leading financial institutions, technology companies, and media organizations on matters involving contractual claims, class actions, white-collar issues, and enforcement risk.

Claire brings significant experience across all phases of litigation, including overseeing fact and expert discovery in cases with complex factual backgrounds. Her past matters include international arbitrations for global financial institutions, class-action litigation involving foreign-exchange benchmark rates, and internal and SEC investigations for public companies.

Before joining Holwell Shuster & Goldberg, Claire was a litigation associate at Wachtell, Lipton, Rosen & Katz.
