Colin Mark maintains a wide-ranging commercial litigation practice with particular experience in federal court jurisdiction, First Amendment, securities, bankruptcy, and fintech-related matters. He graduated from Harvard College and Harvard Law School, where he served as an editor of the Harvard Negotiation Law Review and an officer of the Harvard Law School Negotiators. His commercial litigation practice is informed by his experience as a clerk in the U.S. District Court for the Eastern District of New York and the U.S. Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit.

While in law school, Colin served as a research analyst with Outpost Capital Partners, analyzing litigation-related investment opportunities. He also served as a research assistant to professors Christine Desan, Howell Jackson, and Todd Rakoff, and interned with the U.S. Securities and Exchange Commission. Previously, as a senior analyst working under the direction and supervision of attorneys at an Am Law 200 law firm, he performed legal research and conducted factual investigations of civil and criminal cases across the U.S., Europe, and Asia.
