IPB is pleased to announce that our Estate Planning Practice was recognized by Chambers & Partners in its just-released 2021 High Net Worth Guide. Chambers notes that our team, "enjoy[s] a strong reputation in the market for its substantial experience advising high net worth individuals and families.

I think Ivins, Phillips & Barker's focus on tax matters allows it to be thinking ahead of other firms on how changes in tax legislation can help their clients achieve their goal," observes an interviewee, adding:

"They are my go-to law firm when one of my clients has a difficult tax or estate planning issue to resolve."

Our partners Brenda Jackson-Cooper and Carter Hood are individually recognized. One Chambers source says, "Brenda is very impressive. She is a pleasure to deal with. She is very hard-working, she has great technical ability and is always a joy to work with," while another reports that,

"She is very thorough and focuses on doing what is best for her clients, but she also works with me to make sure what is best can be administered."

Chambers highlights Carter's technical skills and calls him, "highly sought after by domestic and international high net worth clients to advise on cross-border tax and estate planning matters. One source enthuses:

I think Carter is exceptional in dealing with both the complexity of tax planning as well as the personal realities of executing a plan. He is very good at walking through the pros and cons of important complicated decisions with clients and advisers. I have found Carter to be consistently thoughtful and innovative in thinking about tax structures."

Our congratulations go out to Brenda, Carter, and the team!
