

Pat Smith Blog Post on Michigan v. EPA Featured in Procedurally Taxing and SCOTUSBlog

PRACTICE AREAS

Tax

Tax Accounting

Tax Controversies

(Follow-up Update Included)

Patrick J. Smith

Procedurally Taxing

July 2, 2015

Ivins attorney Pat Smith has a post today at the tax procedure blog Procedurally Taxing discussing Monday's Supreme Court decision in Michigan v. EPA and its implications for tax litigation.

- Procedurally Taxing

Follow-up, July 3, 2015:

Ivins attorney Pat Smith's post at Procedurally Taxing on the Supreme Court's decision earlier this week in Michigan v. EPA was cited in the SCOTUSBlog Friday Roundup for July 3, 2015:

- SCOTUSBlog

Commentary on Michigan v. Environmental Protection Agency, in which the Court held that, when deciding whether to regulate emissions from power plants, the EPA must consider the costs to the power plants up front, comes from Patrick Smith, who discusses the tax implications of the decision at Procedurally Taxing.