

What Every Employer Should Know About MIOSHA Top 10 Citations of 2025

February 5, 2026

MIOSHA published its annual list of its top 10 most frequently cited occupational safety and health standards in the past year. This list offers a glimpse to employers of where their safety policies and enforcement measures may need another look. Employers should be aware of the most frequently cited standards and review their own safety policies and enforcement practices to avoid these common violations and the costly penalties that come with them.

Employers should review their safety policies, training, PPE, and enforcement practices often to ensure they are compliant with the applicable MIOSHA safety standards. Even when employers are diligent with the safety program, accidents still happen, and citations still may be issued. If you are an employer who needs counsel or advice related to a MIOSHA matter, the attorneys at Miller Canfield can help guide you through the inspection process, appeals of citations, and provide you with overall best practices to limit your exposure to MIOSHA's penalties going forward.
