

The Impact of U.S. Export Controls and Economic Sanctions on Colleges and Universities

Joseph D. Gustavus

The Journal of College and University Law

October 19, 2016

There is a great likelihood that University research conducted by faculty and students, at one time or another, will be subject to U.S. export control and economic sanctions that (a) impose access, dissemination, and/or participation restrictions on transfers to foreign persons of research regulated for national security reasons or (b) prohibit or limit collaborations with certain foreign persons.

Joseph D. Gustavus

+1.248.267.3317

gustavus@millercanfield.com