

Native American Artifacts Recovery

When the Ounalashka Corporation (Tribe), of the Aleutian Islands, sought the return of its members' cultural artifacts, removed from burial caves during World War II, the return from a major university was negotiated and implemented without litigation even before a later federal law addressing such issues (NAGPRA) was enacted.