

Same-Sex Partner Benefits: A Thing of the Past? - January 11 in Troy

December 20, 2004

Miller, Canfield, Paddock and Stone, P.L.C. announces its next, special edition Morning Update – “Same-Sex Partner Benefits: A Thing of the Past?” – on Tuesday, January 11, from 8:00-9:00 a.m. at the law firm’s Troy office (840 W. Long Lake Road, Suite 200). Miller Canfield labor and employment law attorneys, Felicia Duncan and Charles Oxender, will discuss how the recently approved Proposal 2 may, or may not, affect employers’ same-sex or domestic partner benefit programs.

“We will discuss the ramifications of Proposal 2, which will likely affect public employers differently from private sector employers,” said Duncan. “It has implications for union contract negotiations, domestic partner benefits, national origin discrimination, and ERISA, to name a few.”

Morning Updates are informational seminars focusing on labor and employment law issues and are structured for human resources professionals, CEOs, and business owners. Cost is $20 per person and includes handouts, parking, and a continental breakfast starting at 7:30 a.m. Space is limited. Contact Virginia Herrick at 313/496-7548 or herrick@millercanfield.com for reservations.

Miller Canfield is pleased to offer special pricing for members of the Detroit Regional Chamber. For details call the Detroit Regional Chamber at 1-866-MBRLINE.
