February 16, 2010

Michelle P. Crockett, a labor and employment lawyer and principal at Miller Canfield, is the new chair of the firm's "Women of Miller Canfield" legal and business network. She succeeds corporate lawyer Lisa D. Pick who served as chair for three years.

In her new role, Crockett will lead the firm's more than 100 female lawyers in strengthening their internal, professional relationships with colleagues in all of Miller Canfield's 20 offices. She will also coordinate and foster building business relationships through external strategic business networking and educational events.

"We share best practices, introduce clients and friends to each other and help build business," said Crockett. "The firm has supported women lawyers' networking efforts informally for decades. In 2003 we formalized our efforts and function in a more organized manner."
