Steven specializes in writs and appeals. Steven has extensive experience in both trial and appellate courts litigating a wide variety of complex public law issues involving land use and planning, inverse condemnation, tort liability, constitutional law, elections law, and public works.

Steven represents a diverse array of public agencies throughout California. Every agency has its own unique political, practical, and economic considerations. Steven tailors his litigation strategy to prioritize each client's unique considerations. Steven passionately and expertly litigates cases to achieve the outcome that best meets his clients' needs.

Having experience at all levels of litigation, Steven has unique foresight into the ways cases unfold in litigation. He frequently advises his clients at the administrative level on how to maximize success in anticipated litigation by building strong administrative records.
