Brett Renton, a partner in Shutts & Bowen LLP's Orlando office, discussed ongoing litigation and evolving challenges related to per- and polyfluoroalkyl substances (PFAS) in a recent article by Engineering News-Record (ENR).

The article, "Lawsuits and Limits Multiply with PFAS Chemicals Problem," discusses the issue of unregulated thresholds for PFAS "forever chemical" exposure limits, as well as ongoing multidistrict litigation related to millions in damages for the treatment, testing, removal and disposal of PFAS. Commenting on the highly persistent and transmissive nature of PFAS chemicals, Brett provides insight on various uses of PFAS products in the construction industry and the heightened focus on related safety and cleanup developments. The article also discusses the environmental concerns and emerging remediation and filtration efforts for PFAS-related contamination of public water supplies.
