

Harold “Ed” Patricoff Discusses Ecuadorian President’s Real Estate Ties to South Florida

The Real Deal

Miami partner Harold Patricoff was recently quoted in an article titled “Ecuadorian President’s Alleged Florida Real Estate Ties Raise Questions,” published by The Real Deal. Ed provided commentary on Ecuador’s president, Guillermo Lasso, as well as laws restricting foreigners from owning assets in foreign tax havens and low-tax jurisdictions.

Lasso is tied to roughly 130 properties across Miami-Dade and Broward counties since 2009, valued at $33 million. The purchases were mostly condominium units and townhouses acquired through limited liability companies.

Ed said he believes that while the volume of real estate linked to Lasso may provide bad optics, but is not significant and the switch to Delaware-managed LLCs does not point to anything nefarious. “I think it sends the wrong message,” Ed states. “One would think the president and other high-ranking public officials would want to invest their capital in their own country if they really believed in the economy and strength of their own economy.”
