Partner Ryan Reinert and attorney Bridget Dennis, from Shutts & Bowen LLP's Tampa office, recently authored an American Bankruptcy Institute Journal article, discussing creditor control in individual chapter 11 cases.

Citing Bankruptcy Code and specific case law, they delve into a creditors' options when faced with a debtor that fails to act in the best interest of the bankruptcy estate.

Noting the many factors and state-specific issues to be considered when filing for chapter 11 in Florida, Ryan and Bridget provide details on factors including establishing a budget for the debtor's use of post-petition income, the absolute-priority rule and serving discovery requests through Bankruptcy Rule 2004. In the article, they advise that the "threat of removal of a debtor in possession remains a viable option for a creditor wanting to keep control of the debtor's bankruptcy case, especially for those debtors living the unreasonably extravagant lifestyle."
