

Shutts & Bowen Hosts Discussion on the Evolving U.S. Sanctions Regime

6.3.25

On May 30, Shutts & Bowen's Miami office hosted a timely and engaging discussion on the evolving U.S. sanctions regime against various countries including Russia, titled "Navigating Sanctions: Risks, Opportunities, and What Comes Next." Aleksey Shtivelman, a partner in Shutts' International Litigation & Arbitration Group, was on a panel, together with Kendall Coffey, Partner, Coffey Burlington, which was moderated by Yana Manotas, Law Office of Yana A. Manotas, P.A.

With global rules shifting rapidly, the panel discussed legal and commercial risks companies face when operating internationally, especially in industries where sanctions exposure is complex and fast-moving. From enforcement priorities and the 50% Rule, to secondary sanctions, sanctions lists, and potential policy implications, the conversation highlighted how businesses can stay compliant and strategically positioned for what may come next.
