A federal court Judge in the Southern District of Florida recently ruled that a multimillion-dollar lawsuit filed against Giorgio Armani by its former exclusive home furnishing dealer must be arbitrated, siding with the Italian fashion designer in rejecting arguments that the dealer's claim for enforcement of an oral agreement and other claims are not arbitrable.

As reported by Law360, Mediterranea Trading in 2011 entered into a five-year written agreement to be the exclusive furniture dealer for Armani's home furnishings in South Florida.

In November 2019, Mediterranea Trading filed a seven-count complaint in a Florida state court which Armani removed to federal court. Armani filed motions to compel arbitration and to dismiss the complaint. Mediterranea Trading responded that its claim for enforcement of an oral agreement was not arbitrable and that other claims were outside the scope of the parties' arbitration clause. Mediterranea Trading also argued that Armani, by litigating in the Florida federal case, had waived arbitration.

U.S. District Judge Joan A. Lenard rejected each of Mediterranea Trading's arguments against arbitration and agreed with each of Armani's arguments. "Here, the court finds that all plaintiff's claims are subject to arbitration," the judge wrote. "As such, the court finds that dismissal without prejudice is appropriate." Judge Leonard's detailed opinion provides clarification and guidance concerning a number of important legal issues relating to arbitration, particularly in the context of international commercial disputes.
