Shortly after announcing that Shutts & Bowen LLP's Jacksonville office signed a lease for a new office space, with nearly three times the space of the current location, Law360 Pulse reached out to Jacksonville Managing Partner, H. Timothy Gillis, to comment on the exciting move.

Speaking to the publication, Tim discussed the bigger space, noting that the move was done with the intention of growing over the next few years. "We want to grow this office and the additional space gives us a significant opportunity to do so," said Tim.

In terms of amenities, Tim told Law360 Pulse that the space has a similar modern look to the other offices in Shutts & Bowen's portfolio. "This is a unique building in a unique area of town," said Tim.

Shutts & Bowen's new Jacksonville office is in the Corner Lot Tower at 1000 Riverside Avenue. The new space, which consists of the building's seventh and eight floors, gives the firm 18,352 sq. ft., a significant increase from the current 6,500-square-foot space. Along with the amenities and increased space, Tim said the office is in a thriving business district.
