

Bowman Brown Comments on Mid-Market Economic Slowdown during COVID-19

The American Lawyer

4.2.20

In an article published by The American Lawyer, leaders of firms who serve mid-market businesses said that while larger transactions have slowed amid coronavirus concerns, smaller deals are still moving forward, with clients being “eager to close.”

As labor & employment, bankruptcy and hospitality concerns continue to arise, law firms are receiving many questions from clients regarding extending lines of credit and the economy.

Bowman Brown, Chairman of Shutts & Bowen’s Executive Committee and Chair of the firm’s Financial Services Practice Group, noted the importance of the travel, leisure and tourism businesses to the local economy.

“We’ve had clients call us for assistance for evaluations on government and state programs to provide support to various industries,” he said. “And we anticipate that we will be; that is going to be a very busy area.”
