Shutts & Bowen LLP has just added two high-profile partners in its West Palm Beach and Fort Lauderdale offices, continuing an ambitious expansion in both offices over the last year. Prominent business litigator John Mariani has joined the West Palm Beach office, adding strength to the office's formidable commercial litigation practice. Sandra Krumbein, who has a statewide real estate practice, has joined the firm's Fort Lauderdale office.

The addition of these high-profile partners rounds out a year in which Shutts' West Palm Beach and Fort Lauderdale offices each grew by nearly a third, accompanied by a dramatic strengthening of the firm's commercial litigation, health care and real estate practices.

Mariani is the second business litigator with a national practice and the fifth prominent partner to join the West Palm Beach office in the last month, bringing the total number of lawyers there to 22. He joins partner Eric Christu, who recently announced he was joining the firm, and a litigation team that includes partners Al La Sorte, well known in real estate litigation; Arnold Berman, Shutts' firmwide managing partner for more than a decade and Chair of the West Palm Beach office's Litigation Group; Joseph McSorley, a 24-year veteran of Shutts and former lead federal prosecutor, and Hank Jackson, who has a statewide practice focusing on non-competition restrictions, trade secrets and business torts. Jackson also recently joined the firm.

"The welcome additions of John Mariani and Eric Christu should cement the West Palm Beach office's reputation as one of the strongest business litigation practices in the area," said partner Bowman Brown, Chairman of Shutts & Bowen's Executive Committee. "We expect Sandra Krumbein's statewide practice will flourish with her access to our offices around the state."

Mariani practices in the areas of complex commercial litigation, class actions and appeals, antitrust and trade regulation, product liability defense, securities litigation, complicated shareholder and partnership disputes, trademark and patent litigation, and civil investigations.

Krumbein, who has joined Shutts' Real Estate Practice Group, is the seventh lateral hire in the Fort Lauderdale office in the last year, bringing the total number of lawyers there to 29.

She concentrates her statewide practice on real estate acquisition and development, and condominium and homeowner association issues. She represents owners and lenders in distressed condo sales, receiverships and loan workouts, and teams with developers and lenders in all aspects of sales contract and enforcement issues.
